Department Official Addresses Meeting

W. D. McFarland, Director of Child Welfare, Province of Alberta, spoke to over 50 persons at a meeting held in the Isabelle Selson School music room, Blainmore.

Mr. McFarland spoke on the total adoption program in the province and stated that this year 1650 children had been placed and next year the Department hoped to place 2,000. At any one time he said, there are always 4500 children in foster homes, and of these 1300 are temporary wards. Close to 2,000 of these young people are teen-agers, he advised, stating that these people were hard to place. Each month the Department takes in 200 to 250 children no place in homes and the needs are basically for boys who are not as much in demand as girls.

Mr. McFarland said that the children the Department receives come in from unwed mothers, neglected children who have been taken from their parents, physically abused children, children whose parents cannot live together, emotionally disturbed children and teen-agers whose parents cannot control them.

Although applications are up this year, Mr. McFarland stated that the Department is still flooded with children. He explained in detail the reasons for the pre-checking of prospective adopters by the Department which he said was not only to find reasonably average good homes for children but was also a preventive measure to avoid further grief for the adopting parents.

After outlining many aspects of the adoption procedure Mr. McFarland's talk was highlighted by the showing of slides of young people who are available for adoption. The slides were shown by Stan Smythe of the Blainmore Welfare offices.

A question period was held when all of the questions asked were ably answered by Mr. McFarland. A lunch was served.

Fire Protection Attitude

(By A. E. Bridges, Alberta Fire Commissioner)

Having heard something about the destruction and danger from fire and about ways to avoid fire during the past Fire Prevention Week, will there be any change of attitude towards fire in the minds of Alberta citizens?

The question is, do we believe fire will continue much as before, but, of course, hoping that we ourselves will be able to avoid trouble? If this is typical of our attitude, we ought to take a closer look at a very disturbing situation.

Two weeks ago the Fire Commissioner's Office began counting up the fires and totalling up the losses reported in Alberta each day. In this way, we can see trends and can make comparisons. So, on the basis of information for the past two-week period compared with the same period last year there were the same number of fires, but four times as much property loss. There were also more injuries from fire.

If we are not disturbed by this information we ought to be, because we cannot afford high fire losses since high fire losses are sure to result in higher fire loss premiums. In addition, there were injuries, business interruption and losses of many things that cannot be replaced. It appears that we lack sufficient motivation to bring our fire losses down to tolerable levels. We have the know-how but in some areas of endeavor there is not the necessary will, stewardship and constant supervisory effort.

As Fire Commissioner, I feel we must never be complacent about fire losses. We ought to have pride enough to do whatever is necessary to bring Alberta's fire losses at least well below the national average. We can be sure that if our present rate of losses continues as for the first six months of our Centennial Year, Alberta will again exceed the national per capita fire loss. Therefore, I would recommend that every Chamber of Commerce or Board of Trade take up this matter of cutting down fire waste. These organizations are comprised of leaders in the business community and it could be expected that their positive attitude would be of great advantage and may result in an improved fire loss picture for Alberta.

Queen Elizabeth II Gives Royal Gown To Museum

A royal gown worn by Queen Elizabeth II and seen by only a handful of Canadians during her State visit to Canada in 1957 is being presented to the National Museum of Canada.

In an official ceremony His Excellency Roland Michener, Governor-General of Canada, will present the "Maple Leaf of Canada Dress" to the National Museum this month.

The presentation and unveiling will take place in the rotunda of the Museum at Metcalfe and McLeod Streets where it will be on display to the public.

The Hon. Judy LaMarsh, Secretary of State, will accept the gift on behalf of the Museum.

The Canadian Maple Leaf and the White Rose of York, symbolic of the countries and traditions they represent, intertwine in the richness of the soft green full-length satin gown.

The dress was seen by a total of only 615 persons. It was worn by the Queen when she hosted a banquet for 115 guests—Cabinet members, high military officers, judges and diplomats—followed by a state reception for 500 leading citizens.

The banquet has been described as "une scene unique au monde", topping off a splendid and colorful visit in the autumn of 1957.

The beautiful gown was designed to give particular emphasis to Elizabeth II as Queen of Canada. Styled by Queen's own couturier Norman Hartnell, the dress is graceful in line, flowing from a slim bodice into a full skirt and wide curve of floor length satin.

The skirt measures approximately seventeen and a half feet at the hem, and is particularly full at the back where the material is formed into several small, loose, inverted pleats.

There are three pieces to the skirt: the front piece is cut in a semi-circle and there are two side-back seams and one centre-back seam below the 17-inch neck zipper which joins the bodice and the skirt.

The skirt itself is lined with a non-woven interfacing to give extra body to the material. Attached to the waist is an underskirt of stiff net, lined with green silk. The bodice also has a green silk lining and this fastens separately from the dress by means of hooks and eyes. The bodice is boned in several places, giving extra support and firmness through the long waistline.

The dress is embellished with velvet and studded with jewels in a rising arc patterned in leaves and flowers. The velvet green maple leaves are studded with diamonds and emeralds and outlined in green and white crystals. Among the leaves is the White Rose of York formed of circles of green and white crystals, surrounded by white petals.

It was worn with a diamond tiara, which belonged to her grandmother, Queen Mary, together with a triple link diamond necklace, the deep oval of the dress lending to its depth and radiance. The green harmonized with the blue of the Order of the Garter Sash, held in place by miniature sashes of her grandfather, George V and her father George VI.

The royal visit had been planned for months in advance. Her Majesty, accompanied by Prince Phillip, arrived in Ottawa on October 12, 1957, to open the new session of parliament and to spend the Canadian Thanksgiving holiday with her subjects.

It was an occasion of firsts as Elizabeth II came to Canada as Queen and as the first reigning monarch to open a Canadian Parliamentary session. (Roland Michener, the present Governor-General, was at that time the new Speaker of the House of Commons.)

It was also to inaugurate the first Conservative Parliament in 22 years and all of Canada was able to witness the ceremony as the nation provided one of the first cross-country TV link-ups.

Monday, October 14th was an occasion for color and splendor as the Queen, escorted by red-coated Royal Canadian Mounted Police, rode from Rideau Hall to Parliament Hill in the State Landau to open Parliament.

Enthusiasm and warmth welcomed the Queen. Sunny weather and brilliant autumn leaves lined the avenues of her tour through Ottawa and Hull as thousands greeted her as their Queen.

The visit emphasized the historic traditions that Canada inherited from Britain and at the same time allowed the purely Canadian character of the monarchy to be given prominence.

It is this role that the dress now presented to the people of Canada is intended to demonstrate.

Have you ever wondered...

...if tomorrow will be a good day for haying or harvesting?

For the Alberta farmer, everything depends on the weather and knowing today what it will be like tomorrow is a great asset. Farm-planted weather forecasts, prepared by an agriculturist working in consultation with the Dominion Public Weather Office, are issued daily to radio and TV stations and newspapers in the province by the Information Branch of the Alberta Department of Agriculture. Each forecast gives a Farm Weather Synopsis, which discusses TODAY'S weather and gives special advice on farming operations, and a Regional Forecast for tomorrow plus an outlook for the day after. The probable effect of the weather on farming operations is emphasized throughout. In addition to the agricultural weather forecasts, the Information Branch also provides information and news on farming and home-making through "Call of the Land" farm broadcast, news releases and other methods.

there are in Alberta's

Twenty-five thousand square miles of Alberta, about ten per cent of the entire area of the province, have their portraits taken each year. Over 100,000 of these aerial photographs are on file at the Maps and Aerial Photographs

Branch of the Alberta Department of Lands and Forests. Their purpose is far more utilitarian than ornamental because from these pictures, comes detailed information which allows the Branch to produce accurate and up-to-date maps of the province. For example, each year, maps of the recreational areas in the Rocky Mountain Forest Reserve are updated to provide hunters and fishermen with detailed information as to highways, trails and waterways. In addition, enlargements from the aerial photos are excellent tools for farm planning, oil company surveys, and water resource studies.

...about the purpose
of those strange-
looking instruments
you sometimes see
set up beside Alberta
highways?

Well, it could be to measure your speed but it's just as likely to be to measure the quality of the highway you're travelling on. The Research Council of Alberta, working with the Alberta Department of Highways and the U. of A., is carrying out an extensive search for methods to improve highway construction through improved design techniques and new material specifications. In addition to laboratory studies on the materials being used, field investigations are measuring riding qualities and structural stress, sub-grade characteristics and moisture temperature factors. The purpose is to produce the formula for a highway which will give the greatest travelling comfort and the longest life at the lowest cost. This is just one facet of Research Council activities. Assistance to industry through information services, engineering and research programs and raw material investigations; studies of natural resources, developments of new products and processes using Alberta raw materials; and development of products suited to Alberta markets are all major factors in the operation of the Research Council of Alberta.

prove you were born?

If you're a native Albertan, the solution is simple. Your birth certificate is on file (along with 1,299,999 others) at the Division of Vital Statistics, Alberta Department of Health, where the records date back to the days when Alberta was still a part of the North West Territories. There is provision for recording each birth, death and marriage in the province with this Division. Today, weekly reports from 170 District Registrars and monthly reports from issuers of marriage licenses keep the records up to date. For a fee, and with proof of your identity, you can obtain a copy of your birth or marriage certificate, or a death certificate when necessary. This service is invaluable for old age pension applicants, social agencies and other areas where proof of age is needed. The Division of Vital Statistics assists in compiling the national records by providing micro-filmed copies of its documents to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, and provides an international service by making its records available to all members of the United Nations.

followed in permitting
a teacher from a foreign country to become a part of the Alberta school
system?

All foreign teachers applying for a position within Alberta's educational system are screened carefully by the Teachers' Certification Branch of the Alberta Department of Education. First, it is determined if they obtained their training in an institute which maintains the standard acceptable to the province. Then, they must submit a University transcript of their study program. If their academic credentials are acceptable, they are asked to provide a tape recording of an interview with a person fluent in English. This establishes the ability of the applicant to speak the language. References as to teaching ability and personal acceptability are also required. In addition to screening foreign applicants for teaching in Alberta, the Branch also assesses foreign students for their place in the school system.

...if those strange-
looking insects
appearing in your garden are friends or foes?

Often, it takes the eye of an expert to distinguish between a destructive insect and a useful ally. To obtain the services of the experts in such identification, just check with your local parks department or your district agriculturist. If they can't identify the insect in question, they'll call on the Alberta Department of Agriculture Crop Clinic. There the trained staff, working in a fully-equipped laboratory, will decide whether the species should be destroyed or protected. This same service is obtainable for the identification of questionable birds, animals and plants. In addition, the Crop Clinic plant pathologist advises on the nature and treatment of diseases of plants, be they agricultural crops or ornamental shrubs. Every year, the Crop Clinic identifies the diseases of, and suggests treatment for, over 1,500 submitted samples of field, fruit, vegetable and special crops, as well as household and garden plants.

INDIGESTION AND PATENT MEDICINES

Different people associate different symptoms with indigestion, the Canadian Medical Association reports.

The most common symptoms are pain in the stomach and chest, fullness or bloating in the abdomen, an excessive amount of gas, heartburn, loss of appetite and even nausea. Most people find these symptoms occurring soon after meals, and more frequently after eating certain foods. Sometimes they associate headache and constipation with indigestion.

There are many patent medicines available without prescription which are supposed to be useful in the relief of any or all of these symptoms. The three main groups are antacids, laxative and headache remedies.

Antacids are taken to counteract the effect of the hydrochloric acid, normally present in the stomach. Taking large amounts of antacid may, however, disturb the chemical balance of the body and cause such complications as kidney stones.

The constant taking of laxatives to relieve constipation may interfere with the absorption from the intestines of vitamins and other important food factors.

Some of the drugs commonly used in headache tablets have been shown to cause inflammation of the kidneys.

The C.M.A. says, these are but three examples of why it is unwise for people to administer to themselves large amounts of patent medicines. The other very important factor, of course, is that the symptoms they are treating may be due to an underlying disease. It would be more sensible for the individual to consult his doctor.

Pension Payments To Increase In January

OTTAWA — Increases in Old Age Security pensions, in Guaranteed Income Supplement payments and in benefits and contributions under the Canada Pension Plan were announced October 13 by Health and Welfare Minister Allan J. MacEachen and Revenue Minister E. J. Benson.

In making the announcement in the House of Commons, Mr. MacEachen said that the Pension Index has increased from 1967 to 1968 by the two per cent maximum allowed by the legislation.

He also pointed out that a most important and unique principle has been established by linking pension payments to the Pension Index.

"We are all aware of the difficulties faced by persons who must rely on fixed incomes for their support as they watch the purchasing power of their fixed dollars dwindle over the years," said Mr. MacEachen.

"Now, for the first time, beginning in January, 1968, we have the means to up-date pensions and E. J. Benson, whose department is responsible for contributions, under the Canada Pension Plan. Mr. MacEachen said that the maximum pensionable earnings will be increased from the present maximum of $6,000 to a new maximum of $8,100. As of January, 1968, contributions will be made on earnings between $600 and $8100, instead of on earnings between $600 and $5,000 as at present.

The increase in the maximum pensionable earnings would mean that maximum yearly contributions by employers and employees would be $81.00 instead of the present $79.20; that maximum yearly contributions by self-employed persons would become $162.00 instead of the present $158.40. Contribution tables incorporating the changes are being prepared and will be mailed to all Canadian employers in November.

All Canada Pension Plan retirement pensions in pay will be increased in January. Those which become payable for the first time in 1968 will be slightly higher than they would otherwise have been in pay under the Old Age Security Act and the Canada Pension Plan to reflect increases in the cost of living. This is done by multiplying a benefit or a pension by the ratio of the Pension Index for the current year to the Pension Index for the previous year."

As a result of the Pension Index increasing by two per cent for 1968, Old Age Security pensions will increase from $75.00 to $76.50 per month in January next.

About 1,300,000 Old Age Security pensioners will benefit from the increase in this pension in January, when the eligible age for pension is reduced to 67 years. It is also estimated that approximately 800,000 Old Age Security pensioners will benefit from increases in the Guaranteed Income Supplement. The maximum supplement payable will rise from $30.00 to $30.50 a month in January. For those receiving the maximum supplement their combined benefit will be $107.10 compared to the $105 a month at present.

On behalf of Revenue Minister Benson due to the increase in the earnings ceiling. On the basis of the new ceiling, maximum full retirement pensions, first payable in 1978, will be increased from $104.17 to $106.25.

The flat-rate orphan's benefit and the flat-rate portion of the widows' and disabled widowers' pensions will be $25.50 a month rather than the $25.00 that would otherwise have been payable. In addition, the earnings-related portion of widows' and disabled widowers' pensions will also be affected by the increase in the earnings ceiling.

The Minister said as high as 40,000 retirement pensioners under the Canada Pension Plan will be affected by the increase by the end of 1968, although the amount of increase will not be large because the reduced benefits are being paid in the initial years of the Plan.

Contaminated Water

A First Aid Tip From St. John Ambulance

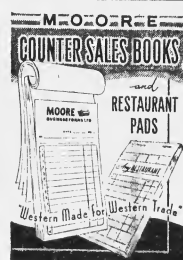

Many summer illnesses can be avoided by being careful about the water you drink at the cottage, says St. John Ambulance, the Canadian First Aid authority.

Unless the water in your particular vicinity has been tested recently and found safe for drinking, always boil lake or river water (or untested well water) before any member of your family drinks it.

Ice cubes too, should be made from boiled water.

The victim of drinking contaminated water feels desperately ill very suddenly, has a high fever, and cannot keep solid foods on his stomach. He should be put to bed, given clear fluids, and examined by a doctor as soon as possible.

Many of the night spots in Le Village at Expo 67 will feature entertainment based on old French Canadian legends which have the devil as their main character.

Hain didn't daunt Labor Minister John R. Nicholson Sept. 29 when he was asked to plant "Canadian Centennial" tulips on Parliament Hill at the stroke of 12 noon. The symbolic plantings, at Ottawa and at provincial and territorial capitals at noon local time, were arranged by the Centennial Commission to mark Tulip Planting Month Sept. 24 to Oct. 24 and to promote the Centennial Community Improvement Program. Holding the umbrella for the labor minister during the noon downpour, above, is Jack Strangers of the Centennial Commission.

October Is Cheese Month

About 2,000 B. C. an Arab merchant was crossing the desert, carrying a flask of milk for his noon meal beverage. He decided to by-pass his noon-day meal and continued along his way until evening. At night when he lifted the flask to his lips—instead of a drink of refreshing milk, all he got was a thin trickle of watery liquid. He seized his knife and slashed open the flask and found a mass of soft white material. With natural curiosity he tasted the material and was delighted with the results (although he was still a little thirsty).

The flask of course, was a dried sheep's stomach and the action of the enzyme in the stomach, along with the swaying motion of the flask caused the process to occur. Yes, this wandering Arab was, at least legendarily, the first person in the world to taste cheese. Word spread and before long cheese was a popular staple food.

Today, in the refrigerated section of the local supermarkets, there is an endless variety of cheese from all over the world. New Canadians have brought special cheeses from their homelands and we are all developing tastes for new and different flavors.

Nutritionally, cheese is a excellent source of high quality protein, calcium, riboflavin and vitamin A. Cheese can add zest and pep to many of your favorite dishes.

The varieties of cheese seem endless, but they do fall into a few specific categories. Here are a few categories and an example of the types of cheese in each one.

Very Hard Cheese include parmesan; a hard cheese without eyes is cheddar; white hard cheese with eyes is Swiss cheese and its "mouse-holes". The semi-soft cheeses are divided into Group 1 including brick cheese; Group 2 with Oka and Limburger; Group 3 is always identified by the blue mold and including Roquefort and Danish blue.

The soft cheese fall into two groups—the ripened cheeses such as Brie and Camembert and the unripened cheese including cottage and cream cheese. This is a very brief outline of the basic cheeses available.

A few points to remember when using cheese. Read the label and choose the kind a recipe calls for. Cook on low heat and do not overcook or it will become stringy and tough. Serve at room temperature. Remove it from the refrigerator an hour before serving but keep it unwrapped and slice it just before serving. Store in refrigerator or keep tightly wrapped to avoid loss of moisture. When preparing a cheese tray offer a selection of at least six cheeses—cut into cubes, slices or wedges or in a block with a knife so the guest may help himself.

National Wildlife Land Capability Study

Alberta Agriculture Minister, H. E. Strom and Federal Forestry and Rural Development Minister, Maurice Sauve, have authorized (under the Canada Land Inventory) a national wildlife land capability study for 1967-68. Total cost of the project ($29,887) will be met by the federal government.

The objective is to assess the capability of settled and potentially settled lands to produce ungulate (hooved) wildlife.

Ungulate densities, age and sex composition, and distribution will be studied over an area of 150,000 square miles, densities to be related to the soil, climate, topographic and vegetative features of the area. The data collected will be useful in the planning of proper land use.

This Canada Land Inventory project will be carried out by the Fish and Wildlife Division of the Alberta Department of Lands and Forests.

Priceless Heritage

Canada, as a forest nation, has been bestowed with priceless heritage. Canada's forest endowment covers 712,000 square miles, chiefly owned by the Canadian people. Every Canadian citizen owns 46 acres of forest. All told, the ownership covers a million sq. miles.

About 80 per cent of the productive forests are publicly owned and administered by the provincial government. As owner and landlord, every Canadian has a direct interest in the forest, its nature, its future, and the wealth it creates for the country. For every family of five, there are about 300 acres of forests in Canada.

Our valuable tourist industry should be attributed primarily to the attraction of our forests. All the drawing cards of wilderness travel, fishing, hunting, the commercial ventures of trapping, our giant hydro-electric development and agriculture all owe a debt to the forest and the forested watershed.

Most Canadians are conscientious guardians of woods, water, and wildlife. But each year 4,000 others set the country blazing and desecrate two million acres. They incinerate 350 million young trees that Mother Nature herself planted as a future endowment for the children of Canada.

From the standpoint of the individual, the woodlands have great value, as a national asset they are beyond price. The aim of conservation is to insure, through wise use and public education, the perpetuation of our forest heritage, so that we may continue to enjoy, in the years to come, the benefits it has made possible in the past.

Open Verdict Returned

A coroner's jury, investigating the death of Judy Gatto of Bellevue in the Blairmore court house October 26th, returned the following open verdict: "We find that the said Judy Gatto met her death September 6, 1967, as the result of head injuries sustained in an accident at approximately 9 p.m. September 5, 1967 on Alberta Highway No. 3, about one mile east of Coleman."

The jury, under the direction of Coroner F. S. Radford, of Blairmore, comprised Don Thornton, foreman; Trevor Slapak and Pete Sartoris of Blairmore, Matt Linderman of Hillcrest, Bill White of Bellevue, and Fred MacLeod of Coleman.

Evidence given by eye-witnesses indicated that George Chodyka of Coleman, was driving his motorbike in an easterly direction on Highway 3 and had 16-year-old Judy Gatto as a passenger on his motorbike. He was in the process of passing an east-bound car and appears to have swung too wide and hit the dirt shoulder on the left or north side, of the highway, lost control of the bike and then struck some guard rail poles.

Evidence given by Dr. R. Varum, attending physician, indicated that Miss Gatto died in Calgary hospital on September 6th from a fracture at the base of the skull and other head injuries. Evidence was given by eye-witnesses Reuben Seaman and Lorraine Petsuk of Coleman, who were in the car the motor-bike attempted to pass. RCMP Police investigated.

Ancient Greeks even predicted the discovery of America. They said, "Inhabited lands may be found westward from Spain on the way to India."
